

COL. MILES MEETS DEATH BRAVELY

he exchanged in a few years for that of Greek and English; this he held until leaving Bimery, in June, 1902, to establish St. Albans School for boys at Radford, Va.

Professor at Emory.

During his first year at Emory as adjunct professor, Colonel Miles was married to Miss Mattie Morgan, of Marion, Va. She is a daughter of the late Vincent Morgan, of Smyth county, and in his time was one of the wealthiest and most prominent men of his section. Mrs. Miles survives her husband with three children—Mr. Vincent Morgan Miles and Mr. George Holland Miles, students this session at Washington and Lee University, and Miss Mary Miles, their younger sister.

In Colonel Miles' immediate family there were eight children, five boys and three girls, four of whom survive him. They are: Colonel Oscar L. Miles and Mr. Pierce Miles, composing the law firm of Miles and Miles, Fort Smith, Ark.; Mrs. L. M. Venable, now residing in Boston, and Mrs. John Pelham, of New York City. Colonel Miles had two brothers, Fanning and Fiedling Miles, both died comparatively young men, and just entering into what promised the most useful and successful periods of their lives. Fanning Miles was for several years mayor of Bristol, Va., and was one of the best known men in his section of the State until leaving Virginia to practice law in Arkansas, where he died suddenly. Fiedling Miles was professor at V. P. I. when he died.

In the founding of St. Albans School, at Radford, Va., Colonel Miles was a most widely known and successful educator, and for the ten years he remained at the head of this institution it maintained a high standard as a preparatory school for the University of Virginia, drawing patronage from nearly every State in the Union, and particularly from those of the South, which territory Colonel Miles traveled himself for several years, thus making friends and acquaintances in all of the larger cities from Virginia to Texas.

Cause of Education.

Though at the head of his school, Colonel Miles found time to interest himself in the affairs of Virginia in educational, political and material lines. Beginning at home, he did much for the town of Radford. He invested in its properties, developed its resources and talked Radford and its advantages. In developing Radford he installed there a power plant, pulling the water of Little River, purchased and operated the electric car line of the city, and finally became owner of the entire water system, operating and improving it in many ways. All of these properties he controlled until the time of his death. He built a line of railroad known as the Radford-Southern, running several miles into the ore deposits on the banks of New River, above Radford, which he subsequently sold to the Norfolk and Western Railway. Many were his interests in the town and constant were his efforts in behalf of the place, though during the last three years, after giving up the active management of his school there, he spent little of his time there.

Retiring from the school work, he made his home at Marion, Va., and there constructed the Marion and Rye Valley Railroad, which he recently sold to the Spruce Pine Lumber Company, of New York, and is now being operated by that company in developing the timber of Rye Valley.

Interest in Public Matters.

In political affairs Colonel Miles' influence was wide, and though he was never a candidate for any office nor had in mind becoming a candidate at any time, his interest in men and measures in his State were none the less keen. He was a staunch supporter of Governor J. Hoge Tyler, his townsman. In his campaign for the Democratic nomination for Governor, and to his effort and counsel is attributed largely the nomination of Tyler.

In the recent campaign in the Ninth District Colonel Miles found time to go on the stump for Hon. J. C. Wyner, the Democratic nominee for Congress, making several notable speeches in Tazewell county. By Governor Tyler Colonel Miles was appointed a member of the Board of Visitors of the University of Virginia, and here he did his best work for the State and the University. He at once became one of the leaders in the movement which put new life in the University and has brought about in a short time changes at that old and honored institution.

So thoroughly familiar was Colonel Miles with the needs of the University, and so capable to bring about the desired results, he was soon regarded by several members of the board as the right man for the first president of the splendid old school, established by Jefferson as the capstone of the public school system of Virginia. This matter was discussed by certain members of the board and finally presented to Colonel Miles, who, with the assurance that he would be elected, he resigned as a member of the body, and the announcement of the board's intention to elect Colonel Miles president followed. This aroused the most strenuous opposition of the board, and in the end he was elected to the position. He was zealous to defend the purposes of the board, his preferred charges against Colonel Miles, which, after an investigation, were withdrawn.

The University of Virginia matter dismissed from his mind, Colonel Miles devoted his time to several development schemes in Southwest Virginia. He was associated with the promoters of the Black Mountain Coal Land Company, only recently acquiring valuable coal properties in Lee county, Va.

In this connection he was much in New York, and there his ability as a financier made such an impression he was tendered and accepted a partnership in the well known banking firm of B. H. Chapman and Company.

He had intended taking up his duties there immediately after Christmas, but just at that time the trouble which finally resulted in his death began to show itself, and growing worse, he sought the attention of Richmond physicians, with the hope of ultimate recovery.

No man in Southwest Virginia was more highly regarded and more generally admired for ability and culture than Colonel Miles. He was a brilliant conversationalist, an eloquent speaker and a profound student of men, as well as of classics.

The Great Seal.

The statement made by a certain historian that the great seal of the United States which is used at the present day by the Secretary of State, who takes it to commissions signed by the President, is the second of its kind in the possession of the government, is not quite correct. There have been three great seals—those of 1782, 1801 and 1862. The eagle of the 1801 seal held only six arrows in his sinister talon, having in some unaccountable way lost seven of the original thirteen. The name of the outer of the die is unknown, and the change in the bird was made without authority. The position of the eagle's talons is the reverse of natural. Tiffany cut the present die, and its heraldic and legal correctness devolved upon James Horton Whitehouse.

Swedish Doctors' Bills.
Swedish doctors never send bills to their patients. Each patient pays what he deems just or is able to give. The physician pays the physician liberally. The patient may have need of his services or not, it has been only retained by them. The poor, if they possibly can, pay him a small sum, and the very poor pay him nothing. You attend the poor as faithfully as he does the rich.
